Star Mazda West Coast Series Re-launches Championship Website

SONOMA, CALIFORNIA. February 12, 2007. World Speed Motorsports, administrators of the Star Mazda West Coast Series, Russell Pro Series and Mazdapalooza Series, announced the re-launch of the West Coast Series website (<http://www.westcoastseries.com>) ahead of the opening round of the 2007 Russell Pro Series.

“We are very pleased to release the new West Coast Series website as we approach our third season managing the various west coast series,” Series President Telo Stewart stated. “This new design will allow us to highlight our series participants and allow fans to follow the action in even greater detail.”

The design of the new website was performed by Eric McCombs, who had served from 1998 through 2001 as a mechanic, race engineer, and data engineer, as well as the team webmaster for World Speed Motorsports, before becoming the Media Director for the Star Mazda Championship presented by Goodyear in 2002. After serving as a media consultant and photographer for World Speed Motorsports for the past several seasons, McCombs has been contracted to provide media, photography and officiating support to the 2007 Championships.

“Telo and the World Speed Motorsports organization have put together an excellent group of series, providing opportunities for drivers of both the Pro Formula Mazda and Standard Formula Mazda, having worked with and won a championship with this organization I am pleased to be here providing support for these series,” McCombs explained. “This new website is the just the start of our efforts to promote the series, the drivers and the sponsors that have made these series possible.”

The West Coast Series website encompasses the Russell Pro Series, the Star Mazda West Coast Series, and the Mazdapalooza Series which feature the Pro Formula Mazda and Standard Formula Mazda race cars produced by Star Race Cars. The four championships feature a $10,000 prize fund, support from a factory authorized Star Race Cars dealer, races at venues across the Western United States, with some West Coast Pro Formula Mazda events supporting the American LeMans Series and the ChampCar World Series, all with the benefit of limited traveling expenses.

The opening round of the 2007 Russell Pro Series and Mazdapalooza championships will be held at Infineon Raceway in Sonoma, California, on February 15 through 18.
